SMART CATCH

FOOD TRENDS FROM SUSTAINABLE SEAFOOD TO PLANT-BASED CUISINE

Sustainability isn't just a buzzword for executive chef David Moscoso and his team at Third Wave Café & Wine Bar in New Smyrna Beach. It's a passion that runs as deep as the Atlantic, which churns just steps from this perfect perch on Flagler Avenue. Moscoso brings both a passion for fresh fare and a respect for the land and sea to his Mediterranean and coastal cuisine.

Third Wave has long sourced local ingredients from Florida farms and supported the direct-source fishing industry. In 2017, the café achieved its first Smart Catch status from the James Beard Foundation and the following year was named one of only two Smart Catch Leaders in the state. This educational sustainable seafood program was created by chefs for chefs to increase the sustainability of the seafood supply chain.

"At Third Wave, I've been able to apply my passions to developing a unique menu that reflects both our coastal location and our environmental ethos," says Moscoso, who has also partnered with Monterey Bay Aquarium's Seafood Watch Program and helped establish the Portland Pact in support of American fisheries.

Moscoso turns certified sustainable offerings like diver scallops and Canaveral shrimp into mouthwatering morsels served alongside Bomba rice, scampi butter and farm sprouts. In its ongoing efforts to engage the chef community in improving seafood both domestically and abroad, Third Wave is well on its way to helping save the oceans for future generations one plate at a time. thirdwavensb.com

Executive Chef;

"I'VE BEEN ABLE TO APPLY MY PASSIONS TO DEVELOPING A UNIQUE MENU THAT REFLECTS BOTH OUR COASTAL LOCATION AND ENVIRONMENTAL ETHOS," SAYS THIRD WAVE EXECUTIVE CHEF DAVID MOSCOSO.

COPPER SHOALS REDFISH Blackened pecan-crusted Texas redfish with a Kentucky whiskey cream sauce, Cape Canaveral wild-caught shrimp, brown butter Manchego mash, and jumbo asparagus

“RESTAURANTS WILL MOVE AWAY FROM WASTEFUL PRACTICES TO MORE SUSTAINABLE OPERATIONS,” SAYS THE RAVENOUS PIG OWNER JULIE PETRAKIS.

Many of the trend lines from 2019 will continue to grow and develop as diners look for healthier and more creative options. Here are three culinary crazes to watch out for as you sit down to tables across the globe.

HEALTH AND WELLNESS Diners are expecting healthy, innovative options that go way beyond tofu. Eateries like Proper & Wild, Winter Park's only from-scratch vegetarian restaurant, are delivering just that with dishes like plant-based burgers made from forbidden rice, quinoa, pintos, lentils and beets. “The more people are eating out, the more important it is for them to have food prepared with higher consciousness and a commitment to health,” says Proper & Wild chef/owner Chelsie Savage. “There’s been a shift from focusing on fat, carbs and protein to eating fresh, real and whole, and there’s no reason these foods can’t be as tasty as they are healthy.”

FROM-SCRATCH KITCHENS It’s about quality over quantity. “Handcrafting pizzas from scratch using fresh ingredients is essential to delivering the best in authentic Tuscan cuisine,” says Francesco Aiello, chef/owner of Francesco’s Ristorante & Pizzeria.

PLANET-CONSCIOUS MINDSET If the movement to rid the world of plastic straws is any indication, restaurants that operate with the earth in mind will surge in popularity. “Restaurants will move away from unhealthy, wasteful practices to more sustainable, green operations,” says The Ravenous Pig chef/owner Julie Petrakis.

SWEET TREATS Desserts will be more traditional but with bolder flavors. “Beauty, simplicity and elegance will continue to drive cake design,” says Stuart Whitfield, executive chef at The Glass Knife. “The use of luxe elements teamed with geometric patterns and texture is a minimal approach that delivers maximum drama.”

THEART OF PRINTMAKING

FLYING HORSE EDITIONS

UCF's Flying Horse Editions, which recently moved to a new 7,000-square-foot studio in downtown Orlando, is one of the country's premier collaborative research facilities for visual art. The studio underscores UCF's commitment to innovation and collaboration by attracting internationally recognized artists to Central Florida to create original limited editions. These artists come to collaborate with artisans who are highly trained in the traditional printmaking processes — etching, lithography, woodcut and silkscreen — and who are skilled at adapting these traditions to the latest digital technologies. By combining time-honored craft with a rule-bending and innovative spirit, Flying Horse helps artists wanting to push the boundary of their practice while creating artwork prized by collectors and institutions around the world.

Will Cotton is one such artist who has found a creative home at Flying Horse Editions. Cotton has created several editions with the FHE master printers over the years, trusting their skill and expertise to create prints that he has not been able to make elsewhere. The image on the cover of this issue, Icing, is a 15-color lithograph that was initially drawn on a special limestone slab that is the traditional method of the lithographic process.

Since its inception, the FHE studio has been a place where artists, students and the Central Florida community come together to explore the mysteries of the creative process — and make lasting contributions to the national cultural landscape. flyinghorse.cah.ucf.edu

OPERA ORLANDO

OPERA ORLANDO CONTINUES TO EXPAND and exceed its mission to produce high-quality operatic entertainment and educational programs through an upcoming season of world-class performances, community engagement, outreach efforts, and its celebrated Youth Company.

Having finished the 2018-19 season with a record-breaking $1 million in revenue, Orlando's premier opera company is excited to embark on its 2019-20 Opera on the MainStage series in the Alexis and Jim Pugh Theater at Dr. Phillips Center. Audiences will enjoy three original productions featuring outstanding voices, stunning visuals, and musicians from the Orlando Philharmonic Orchestra.

"The stage is set for our move into Steinmetz Hall in the fall of 2020 as we continue to showcase exceptional international talent and offer a mixture of opera favorites, plus the Florida premiere of a New York Times critically acclaimed new work," states executive and artistic director Gabriel Preisser.

The season opens with the beloved classic, The Marriage of Figaro (November 1-5), featuring the Opera Orlando

FROM TOP Mezzo-soprano Sarah Nordin and baritone Gabriel Preisser in The Barber of Seville at Casa Feliz, February 2019; Soprano Jillian Marini and mezzo-soprano Sarah Purser in Hansel & Gretel at Dr. Phillips Center, December 2018; Members of the Helena Collective in 6 of VIII at the Orlando International Fringe Festival, May 2019 OPPOSITE Soprano Suzanne Kantorski accompanied by Robin Stamper at Opera on Park at the University Club of Winter Park, August 2018

Chorus and members of the Opera Orlando Youth Company. Executive and artistic director Gabriel Preisser returns to the MainStage to sing the title role of Figaro, joined by María Laetitia, Brittany Renee Robinson and Torlef Borsting.

Next comes All is Calm (December 20-22), a poignant and moving work set during World War I at the Western Front, Christmas 1914. Celebrate the holiday season by reliving this remarkable true story, performed in English, a cappella, and in the round.

The season concludes with Donizetti's The Daughter of the Regiment (March 27-31), a show of equal parts comedy, romance, and vocal fireworks. Orlando native and Metropolitan Opera national competition winner Carlos Enrique Santelli takes on the role of Tonio and the famous aria "Ah Mes Amis ..." with no fewer than nine high C's.

Opera goes On the Town again this season with a site-specific production of Puccini's The Girl of the Golden West on Church Street and a touring production of Amahl and the Night Visitors that will give audiences across the region the opportunity to experience opera. The Opera Orlando Youth Company will continue to nurture the next generation of singers and opera-goers with its production of The Very Last Green Thing in May 2020.
